Utamaro and Tochigi

Utamaro Kitagawa was an ukiyo-e painter in the mid-Edo period. Recently three pictures painted by Utamaro himself—Female Darma, Zhong-kui, and The Three Sumo-wrestling Gods of Good Fortune—were found in an old family in the city of Tochigi. In the Edo period Tochigi was a prosperous commercial city. People used the Uzuma Canal that flows through the city center in order to go to Edo(as Tokyo was known at the time). Having a close connection with Edo, Tochigi came to be civilized and the art of kyōka or a sort of tanka flourished in the town. Kyōka is a comical and satirical Japanese poem containing five lines of 5, 7, 5, 7 and 7 syllables, respectively. Utamaro also known as Fudeno Ayamaru in poetic circles was on friendly terms with the businesspeople that had extensive dealings in Tochigi. It is said that Utamaro's large pictures—Fukagawa in the Snow, Shinagawa in the Moonlight, and Cherry Blossoms at Yoshiwara—were painted at the request of Tochigi's wealthy merchant Zen-no family.
